SALT NZ

A database of spoken language samples collected from New Zealand children (aged 4;06 to 7;06) has been integrated into SALT. This allows the comparison of spontaneous language samples collected from children suspected of having spoken language impairment against typically developing New Zealand children. The language sampling protocols used to collect the samples were carefully designed to be highly relevant to the New Zealand English primary school curriculum and to contain stimulus items that are culturally appropriate to New Zealand children. The SALT NZ software also includes the original SALT reference databases, containing language samples of more than 300 typically developing 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 11, and 13-year-old children drawn from preschools in Madison, Wisconsin or from the Madison Metropolitan Public School System.

Instructional Licenses for SALT

Instructional licenses are available to any teaching institution for $900 + GST. With an instructional license, the instructor is free to install the SALT software on any number of networks or computers setup for instructional purposes. The instructor is free to copy documentation as needed for classroom instruction. The instructor is free to use the programs for instructional preparation. If technical assistance is required, only the instructor should contact Canterbury University for technical support. The software program may not be used by any person for research purposes or clinical services not associated with student training. The instructor can purchase student versions of the program from the University of Canterbury. It is the instructor's obligation to organize the return of these student SALT CD's to the university before the students' graduation. An upgrade is available to institutions who purchased an instructional license in the past.

Student version of SALT

The student version of SALT is identical to the standard version with the following exceptions: 1) the student version must be run from the CD, it cannot be installed on a computer; 2) the tables and reports generated from SALT clearly indicate that they were created using the student version; and 3) product support is limited to questions concerning the mechanics of running the SALT program, it does not include support for questions about the format of the data, the purpose of the various program options, or the interpretation of the results.

Language Sampling Kit on CD includes electronic versions of:

- Language sampling protocol and instructions
- Personal narrative photo set 1 and set 2.
- story book "Ana gets lost" (on Powerpoint)
- Video clips for training purposes.
